They usually give the creator an exclusive right over the use of his/her creation for a certain period of time. Say 50 years. Intellectual properties include an invention, symbol, name, etc.
- Properties and their types with examples.
- The four categories of intellectual property protections include:

1. Trade Secrets: Trade secrets refer to specific, private information that is important to a business because it gives the business a competitive advantage in its marketplace. Examples of trade secrets include recipes for certain foods and beverages (Coco cola, Pepsi, etc.), new inventions, software, processes, and even different marketing strategies.
  2. Patents: A patent is a type of limited-duration protection that can be used to protect inventions / discoveries that are new and useful, such a new process, machine, article of manufacture, or composition of matter. Patents are used to protect inventions and discoveries and copyrights are used to protect expressions of ideas and creations, like art and writing.

A copyright is a type of intellectual property protection that protects original works of authorship, which might include literary works, music, art, and more. Today, copyrights also protect computer software and architecture.
