Sir,
This mail is to bring to your notice the urgent need to ensure quality of question papers before they are used for the exams, when they are conducted with unexplainable difficulties in the midst of all uncertainties of the global pandemic.
Kindly see the question paper attached, which would give credibility to my concerns.
The Signatures question paper cited above shows a high degree of carelessness due to the following reasons.
1. Section A has no instructions as to the requirements, whether to be written in a word or sentence, which carries 3 marks. Unfair is this mark distribution as a child who writes one word or another who writes two or three sentences gain the same mark. This confuses the evaluating teachers more than the students.
2. Questions 10, 11, 12 are all one word responses given for a 3 mark question.
3. Question number 14 asks 'Why did lyudmilla name her baby and why?'. Without even a capital letter for a name, basic requirement of proof reading seems missing in such poorly framed questions reflecting badly on the bodies in charge.
4. Questions 4 and 10 are the same.
5. Section B too lacks the instructions to the nature of response required.
6. Questions 16 and 19 elicits almost the same kind of response which has made it a repeated question, when there are so many beautiful selections in the text which could have been utilized.
7. The answer key has some errors which is even more detrimental since few teachers have taught these selections and they rely on the answer key provided by the university. Students lose a great deal due to this flaw, and a single error from evaluator's side puts them in high risk, with the unequal distribution issue cited above.
There could be a great deal to be done to ensure that the quality of the question papers is maintained. The high education system should ensure the quality of the question papers and the evaluation process.

Ms M K Vineetha, Faculty of English, sent an email to the Controller of Examinations, University of Calicut regarding the mistakes and concerns in the question paper of common course English titled A03: Signatures, for BA/ BSc students in Semester 3, University of Calicut for end semester examination. Our institution regularly evaluates and monitors the continuous and comprehensive evaluation process and the end semester examinations. evaluation processes and end semester examinations to maintain the quality benchmarking as envisaged by the university and higher education departments

Subject: declining assessment quality and question papers: sem 1 Functional grammar and communication:reg

Good day to you sir.

This mail is to bring your notice once again to the pathetic state of academic assessment reflected through a question paper given to first semester UG students, November 2023, for the common course Functional Grammar and Communication.

As a teacher working in an institution affiliated to the University, I believe it is my responsibility to bring this to the notice of the concerned, hence this mail.

The flaws are at multiple levels: in English grammar and punctuation, tasks assigned, mark distribution and the quality of questions.

The institution regularly evaluates and monitors the continuous and comprehensive evaluation processes and end semester examinations to maintain the quality benchmarking as envisaged by the university and higher education authorities. As part of this, Ms M K Vineetha, Convenor, Criterion II sent an email to the Controller of Examinations, University of Calicut regarding the problems in the question paper of University Semester 1, examination held in November 2023.
