

LIBRARY AUTOMATION USING INTEGRATED LIBRARY MANAGEMENT SYSTEM (ILMS)

Since 2008 the Shihab Thangal Library and Information Centre has been using the Library Automation Software Bookmagic. Recently Koha (version 24.05.03.000), an Integrated Library Management System (ILMS), has been introduced as part of modernisation. This transition enhances the ability to manage resources more efficiently and provides better access. Koha is an open-source, web-based system known for its flexibility and ease of use. The software has a full set of tools needed for managing library operations through a clean and intuitive web-based interface. One of the key advantages of Koha is its Integrated Online Public Access Catalogue (OPAC), which allows users to easily search and access academic resources from anywhere at any time. The introduction of this modern software in the library facilitates browsing the collection, checking availability, and even reserving items online, making the system more accessible and convenient for students, faculty, and researchers. Three computers are reserved for the OPAC browsing station. Koha's adoption marks a significant step in upgrading the services of the library to align with global library standards.
